

I urge the FCC to do what is in the best interest of the public, not the media conglomerates. Despite the lack of media attention on this subject, which proves that we need diversity in media ownership, there has been a great grassroots movement to denounce deregulation. To have that cast aside would undermine the principles of democracy, of which the FCC should uphold being part of the federal government. Should the FCC support deregulation, every citizen who sees government serving special interests alone would be proved correct.
